Acupuncture Brandon - Acupuncture is one measure of Conventional Chinese Medicine that has been utilized in China for thousands of years. The process of acupuncture comprises placing solid but fine needles into specific points in the body. Acupuncture is designed to address imbalances within the body and release blocked energy. These imbalances might lead to ill health and result in poor well-being. The popularity of acupuncture has grown greatly in the West, even if it is considered a comparatively new introduction to our medical library.

This form of healing is dependent upon the theory that each individual is filled with a life force energy referred to as Chi or Qi. Balanced Qi or Chi needs the feminine yang and masculine yin elements of the body are balanced and aligned. When in proper balance, the qi would flow smoothly throughout the body along meridians of power. When someone is unhealthy, this suggests that there is an obstruction or imbalance that needs to be corrected. A TCM practitioner talks to the patient regarding the condition and may choose to make use of acupuncture, among other modalities, to treat it.

A session of acupuncture would start with the participant lying flat upon a table. The table must be adjusted to the height of the particular technician. Patients can be asked to remove some clothes while some may be able to remain fully clothed based upon the areas of body which the needles will be inserted. Acupuncture needles are placed into several points of the body. The needles enter at angles ranging from fifteen degrees relative to the skin to ninety degrees, depending on the practitioner's judgment. When the needles have been placed, they can be manipulated by hand in twisting motions, cooled, gently vibrated, heated or electrified with a gentle current so as to stimulate the meridian.

Once the session is complete, the patient can feel relaxed or invigorated. Based on the session and on the patient, the outcome would differ widely. The initial cause of the problem may take quite a few acupuncture sessions to eradicate it altogether or it might have resolved itself. The session must not be painful. If positioned right, the needles do not result in bleeding or bruising. So as to receive a productive acupuncture session, it is vital that you look for a certified acupuncturist who has attended a Traditional Chinese Medicine school.
